In Fall 2008, the Division of Music Education launched “Phase II” of an international initiative to provide students an opportunity to experience music education from a global perspective. As part of a new course, Carl Orff in Context, twenty students and three faculty members traveled to Austria where they spent eight days in Salzburg and Vienna.

Salzburg is the location of the Orff Institute, a music teacher training center connected to the Universität Mozarteum. While in Salzburg, the music education students attended two full days of workshops and observed school music classrooms that used Orff’s teaching approach. While in Salzburg, the students also toured the city (including a spectacular tram ride in the Alps!) and attended a “Mozart Dinner” at the famous Stiftskeller St. Peter (first documented in 803 A.D.) where they heard excerpts of various Mozart operas performed under complete candlelight.

On the fourth day, the group traveled to Vienna where they stayed near St. Stephen’s Cathedral, the nucleus of this magnificent city. While in Vienna, students took a guided city tour, visited the Habsburg’s Schönbrunn Palace, viewed a Van Gogh exhibit at the Albertina Museum, and attended performances in the State Opera and the Konzerthaus. They ended the week at Karlskirche, where they heard a performance of Mozart’s Requiem.

The Division’s international initiative has been highly successful and received enthusiastically by the students. In October 2009, a new group departed for Hungary to tour Budapest, visit Hungarian school music programs, and study at the Kodály Pedagogical Institute, which is part of the Liszt Academy.
As I am writing this column during the holiday season, I would like first to wish for all our alumni, friends, and supporters a happy and fulfilling 2010.

As so much of higher education in America has been severely damaged by the economic conditions of the last year, we have been particularly fortunate at UNT not only to remain financially intact but to have the opportunity to move forward. As you will read in the following pages, we have appointed some outstanding new faculty members, and are currently engaged in searches for four more. Our students and faculty have won prestigious accolades; our facilities have improved; we have taken UNT music to many distant parts of the world; and we have made a lot of wonderful music!

Using the time honored tradition of looking both backward and forward at the turn of the year, I will let our writers’ words cover the recent past, and I would like to share with you some of what we anticipate during the coming months.

The One O’Clock Lab Band’s most recent CD has been nominated for two Grammys, and it looks as if the band’s already planned trip to California in January will make it possible for us to have a UNT presence at the ceremonies. Plan to read about that in the next issue of Counterpoint!

In February, we will have a “first” as we present Smetana’s opera, Prodaná nevěsta (The Bartered Bride) in Czech. Not only will our residency endowment from the Czech Educational Foundation of Texas make it possible to have special Czech coaches, but we will also present a reduced version of the opera in a tour through several parts of Texas where we can engage Czech communities.

In March, we will send six students and four faculty members to Guangzhou, China, under a federal government grant to help start a chamber music program at South China University of Technology. While there is excellent instruction in many of China’s music schools, chamber music study is less developed, and we are honored to share our strength in chamber music in the Far East.

Finally, it occurred to me recently when I was asked about highlights of the coming semester that the spring term is especially rich in the performance of some of the towering works of the repertoire. Our Bancroft String Quartet will be performing Beethoven’s last string quartet (opus 135) in Dallas; the Symphony will perform Mahler’s Symphony No. 1; the Baroque Orchestra and Collegium Singers will perform Bach’s Mass in B Minor; and the Symphony and Grand Chorus will perform the Verdi Messa da Requiem in Denton and at Fort Worth’s Bass Hall.

Although these highlights represent something extraordinary, we have great music every week of the term, and can now invite all of our friends to share it, whether you are in town or not. We have begun live streaming many of our concerts over the internet. They are accessible from our College of Music web site, www.music.unt.edu, where you can also find listings of specific concerts scheduled for streaming.

Again, all best wishes for the New Year, including the wish that your year will be constantly enriched through the pleasures of great music!

Rodney Booth
Lecturer/Jazz Studies (Instrumental Jazz)
Joining the jazz faculty as a lecturer, Rodney Booth is the director of the Jazz Repertory Ensemble. He has been an active professional musician for over 30 years and received his degree in Jazz Studies at the University of North Texas. He was a student of Don “Jake” Jacoby and was a member of the renowned One O’Clock Lab Band. He has traveled across North and South America and Europe with Woody Herman’s Thundering Herd. He has performed with many major recording artists such as Lou Rawls, Dionne Warwick, Ella Fitzgerald, Marvin Hamlisch, Ray Charles and Natalie Cole, to name a few. He has recorded professionally with the legendary soul singer Al Green and country star Janie Fricke.

Timothy Brent
Assistant Professor/Jazz Studies (Vocal Jazz)
Timothy Brent, the new director of vocal jazz for the College of Music, has directed vocal jazz programs at Northern Illinois University and University of the Arts in Philadelphia. He has had arrangements published by the University of Northern Colorado Jazz Press and the University of North Carolina Jazz Press. He holds a doctor of musical arts degree in jazz performance and a master of music degree in jazz pedagogy from the University of Miami and a bachelor’s degree in music education from Western Michigan University, where he was a member of Gold Company as a vocalist and pianist.

Rossitza Goza
Lecturer/Instrumental Studies (Violin)
Joining our string faculty this fall is Rossitza Goza, who is currently concertmaster of the Tulsa Symphony Orchestra and has served as concertmaster of the Verbier Orchestra in Switzerland and the Baton Rouge Symphony in Louisiana. She holds the bachelor of music and master of music degrees from Louisiana State University and the doctor of musical arts degree from Cleveland Institute of Music. She is currently a member of the Brightmusic Chamber Music Society, and a past member of the Fulbright Trio and the Holmberg Quartet.
Christoph Hammer
Associate Professor/Conducting & Ensembles (Early Music & Keyboard)
Christoph Hammer teaches harpsichord, fortepiano and keyboard continuo at the undergraduate and graduate levels, and assists with early music chamber ensembles. He has served as musical director of the Neue Hofkapelle München orchestra, and has conducted masterclasses in Prague, Minsk, and at the Tchaikovsky Conservatory in Moscow. He was awarded the Cultural Prize of the State of Bavaria for service in promoting early music and has recorded extensively as a soloist with many labels including Bavarian Radio, Austrian National Radio – ORF, Czech National Radio and Klavieren Technisches Museum, Vienna.

Stephen Morscheck
Assistant Professor/Vocal Studies
Stephen Morscheck has performed such signature roles as the King of Egypt in Aida with the Metropolitan Opera, Colline in La bohème with Los Angeles Opera, and Raimondo in Lucia di Lammermoor with Washington Opera. He holds the bachelor of music degree from Wheaton College and the master of music and doctorate of musical arts from the University of Michigan. International performances have included St. John Passion with L'Ensemble Orchestral de Paris, and he has recorded Philip Glass’ The Civil Wars with Denyce Graves.

Richard Sparks
Professor/ Conducting & Ensembles (Choral Conducting)
Richard Sparks conducts the Chamber Choir and teaches choral conducting classes. He also participates in the direction of the Collegium Singers. Sparks was artist director and conductor of Pro Coro Canada and the director of choral activities for the Seattle Symphony Orchestra. He was also principal conductor of the Pacific Northwest Bach Festival, and the artistic director and founder of Seattle Pro Musica. He holds the master of music degree from the University of Washington, and the doctorate of musical arts degree from the University of Cincinnati, College-Conservatory of Music.

David Stout
Professor/Initiative for Advanced Research in Technology and the Arts (iARTA)
David Stout teaches and conducts research under the initiative for Advanced Research in Technology and the Arts (iARTA), the new interdisciplinary research cluster that brings together faculty from the colleges of Arts and Sciences, Computer Science and Engineering, Music, and Visual Arts and Design. He received the bachelor of fine arts from the University of Oregon and the master of fine arts from California Institute of the Arts, and has received four media arts and interdisciplinary arts grants from the National Endowment for the Arts. He recently directed the Hot House Project, a large-scale collaborative art and technology festival that featured 45 artists.
Henry Gibbons

Henry Gibbons has been associate professor of choral music for the College of Music since 1980. He has directed the UNT chamber choir Canticum novum, taught graduate conducting and choral literature, and served as chair of the Division of Conducting and Ensembles. He continues to serve as interim chair for the 2009-2010 academic year. He received his early training at Stanford and Harvard universities and holds the artist diploma from the Musikhochschule in Frankfurt, Germany, where he studied with internationally renowned Bach specialist Helmuth Rilling. He has served as clinician, lecturer and guest conductor at choral workshops and seminars in the United States, Europe and the Far East. In addition to his duties at UNT, Gibbons has served as musical director of the Denton Bach Society since 1982.

Lenora McCroskey

Lenora McCroskey has served on the College of Music faculty since 1982. In addition to teaching organ and harpsichord, she was the assistant director of Early Music Studies, teaching Baroque performance practice, continuo, and coaching chamber ensembles. She was responsible for beginning the “Handel project” at UNT in collaboration with Graeme Jenkins, music director of The Dallas Opera. This partnership culminated in several performances of Handel oratorios at UNT and in Dallas. McCroskey has performed extensively throughout the United States and Europe on both organ and harpsichord. She is a Fellow of the Mary Ingraham Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College, and will still be active in the Dallas Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and with the Denton Bach Players.

Paris Rutherford

Paris Rutherford retired as professor of music at UNT after 30 years of teaching instrumental and vocal arranging, vocal jazz styles and directing the top jazz choir, the UNT Jazz Singers. A sought-after clinician in vocal jazz, Rutherford has over one hundred published vocal jazz arrangements. His instrumental arrangements have been recorded by groups such as the UNT One O’Clock Lab Band, the Dallas Jazz Orchestra, and heard in performance by symphony orchestras in Dallas, Denver, Memphis and Fort Worth, among others. He is a member of ASCAP, and a board member for the newly formed Jazz Education Network. He directs Dallas’ newly established jazz choir, New Collection.

David Sundquist

David Sundquist joined the College of Music in 1989 and has served as an adjudicator for the Metropolitan Opera National Council and the National Association of Teachers of Singing. He has sung in over 500 performances of roles ranging from Almaviva to Hoffmann, and in works from Monteverdi to Stravinsky. He has toured throughout the United States and Europe, including the cities of Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Fort Worth, New York, San Francisco, Santa Fe, Washington, DC, Graz, Paris, Salzburg, Strasbourg, and Vienna. A graduate of the Chicago Musical College of Roosevelt University, he also studied at the Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst in Graz, Austria. He will continue to teach for the College of Music as adjunct professor of voice.
Composition

David Bithell served as the coordinator for the newly-formed Initiative for Advanced Research in Technology and the Arts (iARTA) and co-authored a successful grant to organize “iARTA:LEAP” a symposium on leadership perspectives in the field of art and technology. Over the last year he has given performances, lectures, and workshops in Belgium, Korea, California, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Oklahoma.

Joseph Klein hosted a residency for Arthur Barrow in April 2009. Barrow is a North Texas alumnus and was bassist for Frank Zappa from 1978 to 1980. The residency included performances of compositions by UNT composition students, and presentations of the music of Frank Zappa and other artists.

In 2008-2009, Andrew May and Elizabeth McNutt joined forces with composers from New York and the United Kingdom to present the “Tornado Project,” a collaboration by the Center for Experimental Music & Intermedia (CEMI) to promote creative and innovative works. At UNT, Jon Christopher Nelson chaired a panel for presentations by several members of the Tornado Project. In New York, McNutt gave a concert at New York University’s Frederick Loewe Theater with the program including a work by May titled Still Angry. Other Tornado Project concerts were presented in Belfast, Northern Ireland, and at the SEAMUS Conference in Indiana. Future presentations are planned for Aberdeen, Scotland and at the International Computer Music Conference in Montreal, Canada.

Cindy McTee won the Detroit Symphony Orchestra’s Elaine Lebenbom Memorial Award for Female Composers. She will compose an original orchestral work for performance by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra on its Classical Subscription Series. In Fall 2008, she was invited to participate in Krzysztof Penderecki’s 75th birthday celebration in Warsaw and Krakow, Poland (see her separate article on page 17).

Conducting & Ensembles

Eugene Migliaro Corporon conducted the North Texas Wind Symphony at the College Band Directors National Association National Conference in Austin, Texas in March 2009. He also conducted the Wind Symphony on a national tour including Miami University, University of Ohio, and at the World Association for Symphonic Bands and Ensembles Conference at the University of Cincinnati.

Dennis W. Fisher was guest conductor of the North Texas Wind Symphony at the College Band Directors National Association National Conference in Austin, Texas in March 2009. He was also guest conductor at performances at Miami University, University of Ohio, and at the World Association for Symphonic Bands and Ensembles Conference at the University of Cincinnati.

She presented masterclasses at Cleveland Institute of Music, Louisiana State University and Central Florida State University.

Mark Ford performed at the Royal Academy of Music in London, and at the Opole Percussion Festival in Poland. He presented clinics at the 2009 TMEA Conference, at the Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst in Frankfurt am Main, and at Mississippi, Ohio, and Louisiana State universities.

During 2008-2009, James Gillespie presented masterclasses in China at the China Conservatory of Music in Beijing, for the People’s Liberation Army Band, and at the China International Clarinet and Saxophone Festival in TaiYuan. He recently completed his 31st year as the editor of The Clarinet, the quarterly journal of the International Clarinet Association.

Jayme Haefner was appointed Secretary for the American Harp Society Board of Directors and Liaison for the World Harp Congress Review. She presented lectures at the American Harp Society Summer Institute in Salt Lake City, Utah and the World Harp Congress in Amsterdam. She gave numerous performances throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth area, including Mozart’s Flute and Harp Concerto with Terri Sundberg at the Dallas Museum of Art.

Keith Johnson was elected in April 2009 to the Board of Directors of the International Trumpet Guild. His membership on the Board is for a four-year term. He presented a clinic on trumpet performance in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania and looks forward to attending the 2010 ITG conference in Australia.

Vern Kagarice and Jan Kagarice accompanied the Maniacal 4 Trombone Quartet to Gothenburg, Sweden and the International Trombone Competitions in Aarhus, Denmark. They led the Quartet to win first prize at the competitions in June 2009. Jan also accompanied the Maniacal 4 to the 2009 Brazilian Trombone Festival in Belem, Brazil in February 2009.

Eric Nestler presented a lecture on Feld’s Saxophone Quartet at the World Saxophone Congress XV in Bangkok, Thailand. He completed his term as secretary of the International Saxophone Committee, an elected position from the members of the World Saxophone Congress.

Paul Rennick presented a clinic at the Percussive Arts Society International Convention (PASIC) in Austin, Texas. He directed the UNT Drum Line in the Collegiate Marching Competition, winning first prize; this is the 14th time the Drum Line has won this event.

Nikola Ružević led the Bancroft String Quartet on a tour of Japan which included concerts, workshops and solo recitals performed in local schools as well as the Brahms Chamber Music Festival. See page 35 for the story about this tour. He spent summer 2009 giving masterclasses and teaching privately at the Croatian String Teachers Association Summer Festival, and at the Uzmah Summer Music Festival.

William Scharnberg led two student groups of brass players in the outreach program titled “Project Hope,” which aimed to provide community venues for students to get performance experience. The first group was a euphonium-tuba quartet and the second was the...
Center for Chamber Music Studies graduate student brass quintet that performed at Immaculate Conception Church in Denton.

Edward Soph was presented with the Percussive Arts Society’s Lifetime Achievement in Education Award at the Society’s most recent convention. The award recognizes individuals who have a sustained history of exceptional contribution to percussion education.

Terri Sundberg was recognized by the UNT Women’s Center for her work to further public awareness of women’s issues.

Tony Baker, John Holt, Keith Johnson, Donald Little, and William Scharnberg of the Faculty Brass Ensemble collaborated with the Denton Bach Society to present “The Best of Brass,” which included a program spanning four centuries of music from Giovanni Gabrieli to Bruckner to McCullough.

Jazz Studies

Stefan Karlsson received the Rich Matteson Award at the University of Northern Florida for excellence and dedication to jazz education.

Brad Leali played jazz saxophone in the band that backed the many stars who performed at the “We Are One: The Obama Inaugural Celebration at the Lincoln Memorial” in January 2009. At this inaugural event, he played with such artists as Bruce Springsteen, James Taylor, Garth Brooks, Beyonce, U2, and John Mellencamp and the concerts were broadcast worldwide by HBO. He also was the featured artist with the One O’Clock Lab Band at the World Saxophone Congress XV in Bangkok, Thailand.

John Murphy, who has been a member of the UNT jazz studies faculty since 2001, was appointed chair of the Division of Jazz Studies after serving as interim chair since Neil Slater’s retirement in August 2008. He also conducted the UNT Jazz Septet at the Crested Butte Music Festival in Colorado in a program titled “Grooves of Generations” which featured original big-band jazz music.

Lynn Seaton was honored as Jazz Artist of the Year by the Sammons Center for the Arts, a nonprofit corporation in Dallas. The award honors local artists who have greatly contributed to the Center’s jazz program.

Steve Wiest was officially appointed the director of the One O’Clock Lab Band. The One O’Clock Lab Band was invited to perform in March 2009 at Birdland, the famed Manhattan jazz club dubbed “the jazz corner of the world.” In Summer 2009 he conducted the One O’Clock Lab Band in special performances at the World Saxophone Congress XV in Bangkok, Thailand.

Keyboard Studies

Joseph Banowetz finished his six-city tour of India, a four-city concert tour of China, and appeared at international festivals in London and Manchester, England and Varna, Bulgaria. Banowetz’ book on piano pedaling (Indiana University Press) has been released in a new German translation by Schott Publications in Berlin, and is the sixth foreign language in which it has to date been published.

Jesse Eschbach organized and played at the official “Inaugural Organ Conference: A Celebration of the Richard Ardoin-Paul Voertman Concert Organ” conference in Fall 2008. He taught two days of masterclasses in Rome, Italy at Saint-Paul’s Within the Walls Anglican Church and recently finished his 24th year with the Summer Institute for French Organ Studies held in Bordeaux and Epernay, France.

With a newly redesigned website, state-of-the-art technology, and more opportunities for interdisciplinary collaboration, the College of Music Composition Division in alliance with other UNT colleges and individual departments is committed to preparing students for diverse careers as composers in the twenty-first century. Over the past four decades, the Composition Division has demonstrated a successful record of collaboration between music and other art forms, ranging from film and visual arts to dance, theatre, computer science and engineering.

In the 1960s, when composition professor Merrill Ellis established the Electronic Music Center (EMC), which later became the Center for Experimental Music and Intermedia (CEMI), students and faculty members experimented with new technologies, creating music for tape and synthesizers. Ellis’ interest in intermedia composition started another tradition at UNT: one of collaboration between composition students and visual and theatre artists. Joseph Klein, the current division chair, says that this interdisciplinary approach to composition was, at the time, unique in a university setting. The interaction between music and media systems currently thrives in CEMI, which will integrate even more disciplines with the new UNT research cluster, the Initiative for Advanced Research and Technology in the Arts (iARTA). With CEMI director Andrew May’s focus on interactive computer music systems, professor David Bithell’s interest in intermedia composition, Jon Nelson’s experience with fixed media, Cindy McTee’s interest in mixing ensembles with technology, and the addition of new iARTA faculty member David Stout, UNT will continue the interdisciplinary tradition that sets it apart from many other schools.

The Composition Division’s primary concert series events—Spectrum and Centerpieces—provide venues to present new student works. In the past, Spectrum focused on acoustic/traditional works while Centerpieces presented electronic/tape music. According to Klein, this kind of segregation still exists at many colleges across the country; but recent concerts in the composition program reflect a much greater integration between traditional and experimental media. Nova, the division’s resident contemporary music ensemble, directed by Elizabeth McNutt, performs new and established compositions that feature live instruments, electronic sound, and intermedia collaboration. The Composers’ Forum, a student organization comprised of graduate and undergraduate composers and performers, is now in its fourteenth year.

The partnership between the College of Music’s CEMI and the newly formed UNT research cluster iARTA is bringing together faculty members from colleges and departments as diverse as Radio, Television, & Film, Dance and Theatre, Visual Arts, and Engineering. The goal of iARTA is to promote area interaction, serve as a vehicle for subject collaboration among faculty members, advance research through its journal, MOEBIUS, create degree programs, and perform intermedia works both locally and nationally. These collaborations also focus on creative work in the interdisciplinary arts, research, and technological education that provides students with opportunities to succeed as composers in the twenty-first century.

In the fall of 2008, Regents Professor of Music Composition, Cindy McTee, attended three music festivals in Poland celebrating the 75th birthday of Krzysztof Penderecki, arguably one of the most influential and highly-regarded composers of the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries. During that time, she also stayed and traveled with the Penderecki family, reliving the many memorable experiences of her youth as a student in Poland. What follows is the text of a short speech she delivered during a festival event in Krakow:

In 1974, while a guest at Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Washington, Krzysztof Penderecki invited me to live with his family, teach his children English, and study composition with him at the Academy of Music in Krakow. I agreed of course, and spent an entire year in Poland, one of the very best years of my life. I also studied counterpoint with Maria Fieldorf, and orchestration and composition with our dearly departed Marek Stachowski and Krysztof Moszumanska-Naza.

While attending Yale University, I spent two additional years with the Penderecki family in New Haven. And in 1989, I returned to Poland on grants from the Fulbright Foundation and the University of North Texas to teach at the Academy’s electronic music studio. My last visit was in 1993 to help celebrate Krzysztof’s 60th birthday.

So Poland, the Academy of Music, and the Penderecki family have shaped my life in very important ways. It is here – my second home – that I received early lessons in commitment, professionalism, and the benefits of hard work. Both Krzysztof and Elżbieta provided me with wonderful role models, and I shall be eternally grateful for their generosity, their support, and their friendship over many years.

I am also very thankful to have had the opportunity to participate in Penderecki’s 75th birthday celebrations, both in Warsaw and here in Kraków. It was truly inspirational to hear the early, middle, and recent works of Penderecki in such close proximity and therefore to experience not only the depth but the breadth of this great composer’s work.

Krzysztof, on behalf of your students, I would like to say that we respect, admire, and cherish you and your music and wish you many more years of health, happiness, and productivity. And to Elżbieta and the many others who worked tirelessly over months to produce the many excellent concerts in Warsaw, and also to those who have produced concerts here in Krakow and all over Poland, I thank you too for your time and devotion to this historic celebration of Polish culture.

Kraków 3, 12, 2008

Cindy McTee returned to the United States and in Spring 2009 had three performances of Einstein’s Dream with the Nashville Symphony and won the Detroit Symphony Orchestra’s Elaine Lebenbom Memorial Award for Female Composers.
Guest Artists

Pinchas Zukerman

Pinchas Zukerman, the world famous violinist, worked with three of UNT’s top string students in a special masterclass in March 2008. Student violinists Sei-Jin (Samuel) Park, and Szemoke Jobbagy and student violist Michelle Paczut performed works by Paganini, Ysaÿe, and Hindemith, respectively. As Zukerman spoke of performance practice and aiming the sound to the “exit sign,” he said, “catch and release the music; capture the music in the instrument and release it to the audience.” Equally respected as a violinist, violist, conductor, pedagogue and chamber musician, Zukerman was named music director of the National Arts Centre (NAC) Orchestra in Ottawa, Canada in 1998, and continues to guest conduct and perform with the world’s finest orchestras.

Mario Lavista

Renowned Mexican composer Mario Lavista was at UNT for a four-day residency in February 2009. He was invited to speak at the College of Music by Ana Alonso-Minutti, assistant professor of music history and coordinator of general studies in music, with his residency co-sponsored by the Mexican Consulate of Dallas. During several lectures, Lavista explained that the inspiration behind some of his chamber and solo pieces has roots in literary sources (Spanish, Mexican and Chinese poetry, Greek mythology, and Biblical texts). He also emphasized composer-performer collaboration as important in realizing the full potential of a composition. His residency concluded with one of his pieces for solo flute, Lamento, being choreographed by faculty from the Dance and Theatre Department at UNT. In addition to composing, Lavista has taught at several universities in the United States, including the University of Chicago and Cornell University.
The Dave Brubeck Quartet

The Dave Brubeck Quartet held a week-long residency that included masterclasses; lectures in composing, jazz arranging, improvising, and the history of jazz; open rehearsals; and two sold-out concerts. The residency concluded with extraordinary performances at the Murchison Performing Arts Center. The first night was a full evening of music-making centered on a performance of Brubeck’s own Pange Lingua Variations with the UNT College of Music Symphony Orchestra and Grand Chorus, directed by Russell Gloyd. The night ended with a collaboration between the Brubeck Quartet and the One O’Clock Lab Band, directed by Steve Wiest. After receiving overwhelming demand for tickets for the first concert, a second concert was added which focused on the Brubeck Quartet playing a more intimate concert to another capacity audience.

Leonard Slatkin

In January 2009, internationally renowned conductor, Leonard Slatkin, rehearsed the UNT Wind Symphony in readings of William Schuman’s George Washington Bridge and Persichetti’s Symphony for Band. He also held a question and answer period following the rehearsal in which he talked about how to control performance anxiety, what to expect when auditioning, the value of playing in an ensemble, planning for the future, and the joy that comes from music when talent and hard work prevail.

Having conducted virtually all of the world’s major orchestras, Slatkin is currently music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and principal guest conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra. He also has demonstrated a commitment to arts education and to promoting the music of young composers, having founded the National Conducting Institute, worked with student orchestras throughout the United States, and premiered countless student compositions with professional orchestras.

Jessica McCormack (DMA) has been appointed assistant professor of voice at Wittenberg University in Springfield, Ohio.
The College of Music is pleased to announce that we have begun work to renovate the Concert Hall. This $6.4 million project will convert our dilapidated 625-seat space into a smaller, acoustically isolated hall that seats about 400 people. The renovation project team includes WHR Architects, Jaffe Holden Acoustics, Schuler Shook lighting and sound consultants, Purdy McGuire mechanical electrical plumbing, and Byrne construction services.

The project will include major upgrades to reduce noise, and provide sound isolation through the creation of sound lock vestibules. The project also will provide new seats, a smaller stage and a more intimate, updated environment that will serve us well for faculty and student recitals, chamber music, and small ensemble concerts. To date, the Otto Hofmann organ has been removed and demolition and abatement work began in fall 2009. This winter, the construction will begin in earnest and we anticipate that the project will be completed by the close of summer 2010. We are thrilled that the College of Music will soon enjoy the use of another beautiful performance space that reflects the high quality of our performances.
A Grammy Comes Home to North Texas

Duane Hargis with Ruben Ramos and The Mexican Revolution

College of Music student Duane Hargis won a Grammy award in 2009 as part of Ruben Ramos and The Mexican Revolution. Hargis plays trumpet with the Mexican Revolution and their Viva La Revolucion took home the award for top Tejano album.

Hargis joined the Austin-based Mexican Revolution in 2008 and is a full-time graduate student in the Jazz division, pursuing a master's degree in jazz studies. He credits his UNT education and several UNT music faculty members for his success. He studies with Jay Saunders (director of the Two O'Clock Lab Band), Mike Steinel (professor of jazz studies), and John Murphy (chair of the Jazz division). “The UNT College of Music has an excellent program that is really demanding, and that creates a reputation that is unbreakable,” said Hargis, who currently lives in Denton with his wife and two children. During the week, he attends classes as a graduate student and plays lead trumpet with the Four O’Clock Lab Band. On weekends, he tours with the Mexican Revolution, performing throughout Texas and other states with the eight-piece band. He earned a bachelor of music degree from UNT in 2007.

Other Grammy winners this past year have UNT connections, including the Eagles, featuring former student Don Henley, and Béla Fleck and the Flecktones, a band that includes former student Jeff Coffin. The Eagles earned a Grammy in the Best Pop Instrumental Performance category, and Béla Fleck and the Flecktones won in the Best Pop Instrumental Album category.

Charlene N. Drake Harp Donation

The College of Music Harp Department received the generous donation of a gold Lyon & Healy Style 23 harp from Kathryn Drake, daughter of UNT alumna Charlene North Drake (BMus ’49).

Charlene Drake was originally from Fort Smith, Arkansas, and after graduating from North Texas State University taught first in Gainesville, Texas. She moved to Alvin, Texas in 1949, where she taught public school elementary music, and gave private lessons for thirty years. Charlene wrote a method book for the 22-string harp when she was seventy, and played harp, organ and piano.

This generous donation will be used widely by both undergraduate and graduate harp students in the College of Music for practice, solo and ensemble performances. It also will be used during the American Harp Society Summer Institute and National Competitions, which will take place at UNT in June 2011.
Faculty

Stefan Bardas was professor of music from 1955 to 1980. He was born in Germany to a prominent musical Austrian family and survived the Holocaust by attending the Conservatory of Saint Cecelia in Rome. Before North Texas, he taught at Carroll College, Wesleyan University, and Northwestern University. He was well known for his performances of the cycle of the 32 Beethoven Sonatas. After his retirement he continued to teach piano at El Paso Community College, was an adjunct faculty member at New Mexico State University and taught private lessons.

Alumni

William J. Stephens (BMus ’49) earned his degree in organ performance and later studied at the University of Colorado where he was assistant instructor in organ. Stephens served in the Navy during WWII and went on to teach music in the public schools in southern Texas, was the organist-choirmaster of Trinity Episcopal Church and Trinity Lutheran Church in Victoria, Texas and was the South Texas representative for the Reuter Organ Company. He also served as curator of organs at Christ Church Cathedral in Houston and became a longtime member of the Trinity Episcopal Church in Lawrence as well as the Organ Historical Society. Stephens retired in Lawrence, Kansas and is survived by his wife of 62 years, Mary Durett (BMus ’48) and their five children.

Fred Bilderback (BMus ’61) was a band director for more than 30 years and was a faithful member of Green Acres Baptist Church in Tyler, Texas.

Mary Francis Childress (MM ’52) taught English and music at Jacksonville High School for 44 years. She also played piano for church, civic and social functions. She was a member of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, Phi Mu Society, Delta Kappa Gamma Society and the Pink Lady Auxiliary. She was living in Ozark, Alabama.

Albert Hollinger (BMus ’43) earned his bachelor’s degree in music education from UNT.

Jack W. Hudgins Jr. (MM ’49) served in the Fourth Army Headquarters in San Antonio playing oboe, clarinet and saxophone. After earning his doctorate, he worked at San Angelo College and Texas College. In 1967, he became the founding president of Angelina County Junior College. Upon retiring in 1991, he was named president emeritus, and he taught music appreciation classes for an additional 10 years. Survivors include his sister, retired music lecturer Mary Nan Mailman (MM ’56), and nephew Matthew Mailman (DMA ’95).

Karen C. Janes (BMus ’80) played and taught piano and double bass. She was the organizer and accompanist for the Northwest Recital Singers, principal bassist with the Bellevue Philharmonic Orchestra in Washington State, president of Thalia Allied Artists and a member of numerous classical music organizations. She was an accompanist in more than 50 concerts a year and composed many songs published by Alberta Keys Publishers.

Robert B. Ferguson, Jr. (BMus ’56) entered the Army in 1957 and was stationed at Fort Myer in Arlington, Virginia until his retirement in 1985. He was a member of the Army Band as a trumpet soloist and principal cornetist. He performed at the inaugurations of presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Carter and Reagan and at the state funerals for presidents Eisenhower, Hoover, Kennedy and Johnson. During retirement he performed with the Gary Marvel Big Band and worked as an assistant band director at a local high school. He is survived by his wife, Chong, and three daughters.
Euline and Horace Brock have shaped North Texas through service on many boards and development committees. Euline Brock led Denton as mayor from 2000-2006 and Horace Brock founded the University of North Texas Institute for Petroleum Accounting and led the College of Business as a distinguished professor and advisor.

The Brocks have generously supported the university with their time, expertise, and financial resources, particularly the College of Music. As an example of the benefits from the Brocks’ philanthropy, the College of Music was able to make it possible for María José Romero Ramos to return to UNT to pursue the Graduate Artist Certificate. Fortified with their support, María has had a rewarding semester performing her first recital as she works towards earning this certificate in violin and preparing for a professional career in performance.

The Brocks’ most recent major endowment contribution has created the Brock String Merit Scholarship. This annual scholarship, to be awarded for the first time in Fall 2010, will include the full cost of attendance for an outstanding string student and will be granted strictly on the basis of merit, talent, and skill.
The UNT College of Music is recognized nationally and internationally as a world-class training ground for musicians and has long been known for its ensembles, such as the One O’Clock Lab Band, Symphony Orchestra, Wind Symphony, A Cappella Choir, Opera program, and Baroque Orchestra. In fact these ensembles have constituted the leading edge of the College’s excellence, not only because of the focused professional preparation they provide, but also because of the very nature of the collaborative, student-centered learning experience, directed by our very best faculty. For ensembles to be the renewable student-centered resource that defines the quality of the institution beyond a particular student generation, they must attract to UNT a wide variety of populations representing many kinds of ethnic, social, and education diversity.

The importance of the ensembles is reflected in the College’s Campaign, the Fund for the Advancement of Music Ensembles (F.A.M.E.). Distributions from the fund will be used for merit-based scholarship support for students participating in ensembles, costs associated with ensemble tours, and recordings and promotion. The $20 million F.A.M.E. Initiative will assure the enhanced quality and reputation of the College of Music through its strongest traditional resource, its ensembles. Additionally, members of top ensembles are effective ambassadors, not just for the College of Music, but for the entire university in its mission.

The primary goal of the F.A.M.E. Campaign is to be able to award scholarships to the top 10% of our students at the average level of $5,000 annually and the next 15% at levels averaging $2,000 per year. This top quarter (approximately 425) of our students must be of a quality that defines excellence and sets a pace for others to aspire to such levels. The second part of the initiative, the touring and recording fund, will be used strategically to seize specific opportunities and help move the program forward.

The F.A.M.E. Campaign goal is $20 million. This amount, as principal, will yield approximately $800,000 per year. When added to our current scholarship endowment, it will allow us to reach our goal of $1.3 million in scholarship support per year, with approximately $150,000 to $175,000 per year to be reserved for matching current touring and recording budgets. The success of the campaign will put the University of North Texas on a financial basis competitive with its peers and assure a future worthy of the great traditions of its College of Music. Such an accomplishment will become possible only through the commitment and generosity of College of Music supporters like you.

The Bancroft String Quartet, known as the premier student string chamber group in the College of Music, was invited to perform in the Upbeat String Music Festival and Brahms Chamber Music Festival in Japan in Spring 2009. The Bancroft Quartet consisted of violinists Szemoke Jobbagy from Hungary and Samuel Park from Germany, violist Michelle Paczut from Gume, Illinois, and cellist Esra Celikten from Turkey. Mihaela Čuljak from Croatia, also performed on cello. Nikola Ružević, assistant professor of cello, accompanied the Center for Chamber Music Studies students on the trip.

The students performed 10 concerts during the two-week March trip, including four concerts and workshops in local schools and three concerts in the Brahms Chamber Music Festival. In addition, the students performed in Nango Temple in Obihiro, in the Town Hall in Nakasatsunai and at the Olympic Centre in Tokyo. “This was a wonderful opportunity for the students to experience another country and play nearly every day in a different place, just as they will when they become professional musicians,” said Ružević, who is also the artistic director and co-founder of both Festivals. Ružević also taught workshops and held masterclasses, and was a featured guest artist for the Brahms Festival.

Their performances in Japan strengthened the exposure of UNT and will attract new Japanese students to join the College of Music. The Bancroft Quartet, with new cellist Ross Gasworth, is looking forward to bringing a chamber music program to the South China University, College of Arts, in Guangzhou, China in Spring 2010.
