I am pleased to extend greetings to all our readers in this, my final Counterpoint column as Dean of the College of Music. I will retire as dean on January 1, 2016, but will remain as a professor for now, savoring the honor and responsibility of being part of our distinguished faculty. It is, of course, difficult to know the best time to pass leadership responsibilities on to someone else, and I have been considering the matter for some time.

The College is in a very healthy position right now, and that made it easier to determine that this was indeed the right time. For the first time in a number of years, we have no funding cuts looming, and we have been given unprecedented flexibility within our existing resources. We are able to do more for our students than ever before. In addition to graduate assistantships, Academic Achievement Scholarships for doctoral students and academically based undergraduate scholarships, our own scholarship budget has more than doubled, to an annual level of about $900,000.

It has been the greatest joy and honor of my career to have served as dean of this outstanding college for the last fourteen years. These years have seen the funding for our first two endowed chairs, a massive renovation creating what we now know as Voertman Hall, smaller renovation projects in both the Music Building and the Murchison, the acquisition of concert-quality pipe organs in both Winspear Hall and the main auditorium, the development of doctoral programs in Jazz Studies and Ethnomusicology as well as the current Graduate Artist Certificate program, a new summer-only Master’s in Music Education to begin in 2016, the introduction of clinical services for performance health through our Center for Music and Medicine, the expansion to two full symphony orchestras, a similar expansion of wind ensembles, the development of a formal chamber music program and a Center for Chamber Music Studies, the richly endowed residency in Czech Music and Culture, and numerous other international relationships, including tours, exchanges and ongoing partnerships. The majority of our faculty and staff have been hired within this period of time. These and many other accomplishments are the result of the work of many, and I am grateful for the opportunities to help good people accomplish remarkable things whenever I could. Championing the accomplishments of our faculty and students and advocating for important enhancements have constituted much of the pleasure of these years.

Please let me conclude by thanking all of you—alumni, friends and supporters—for all you have done for our College of Music and for me as dean. I urge you to continue to help make UNT the best place for music study that can be found!

All best wishes,
James C. Scott

Alan Baylock (One O’Clock Lab Band)
Associate Professor

Alan Baylock (MM ’95) is quickly becoming recognized as one of the most creative young voices in the music business today. He is in demand as a composer, arranger, conductor, producer, instrumentalist and educator. Baylock is currently the chief arranger for the United States Air Force’s Airmen of Note and is the leader of the Alan Baylock Jazz Orchestra, founded in 2001. Since 2012, Baylock has been jazz composer-in-residence at Shenandoah University, where he has taught jazz arranging and jazz pedagogy and co-directed the conservatory jazz ensemble. His music has been performed and/or recorded by jazz greats such as Maynard Ferguson, Doc Severinsen, Arturo Sandoval, Joe Lovano, Kurt Elling, Freddie Hubbard, Michael Brecker, Phil Woods, David Liebman, Jerry Bergonzi, Bobby Shew, Kenny Werner, Paquito D’Rivera, Kurt Rosenwinkel, Kenny Werner, Joshua Redman, Nicholas Payton, Nnenna Freelon and Tierney Sutton. His eclectic talents have also led him to writing music for Roy Clark, Lee Greenwood, Wynonna, Al Jarreau, Chaka Khan, Patty LaBelle, Spyro Gyra, Ronan Tynan, and a number of symphony orchestras in the United States and abroad. Serving UNT part-time in 2015–16, Alan will join the faculty full-time in fall 2016 after completing his military service.

Jason Bergman (Trumpet)
Assistant Professor

Prior to joining UNT, Jason Bergman served as a professor of trumpet at the University of Southern Mississippi. He previously performed as associate principal trumpet of the Santiago Philharmonic in Chile, and is currently principal trumpet of the Mobile Symphony Orchestra and Mobile Opera. Jason has given recitals and masterclasses at more than 30 institutions worldwide, including: the Peruvian Trumpet Seminar, Música nas Montanhas Festival, University of São Paulo, Florida State University, University of Georgia, Baylor University, Texas Christian University and University of Tennessee. He has performed or presented clinics at conferences of the International Trumpet Guild, International Tuba Euphonium Conference, the College Music Society, Mississippi Bandmasters Association, and Mississippi Music Teachers Association, and is a contributing author for the Grove Dictionary of American Music, Second Edition. Currently serving as a recording reviewer and the editor of the Orchestra Section Profile for the International Trumpet Guild, Bergman holds a bachelor of music degree in trumpet performance from Brigham Young University, master of music degrees in trumpet performance and chamber music from the University of Michigan, and a doctor of musical arts in trumpet performance and chamber music from the University of Michigan. He is an endorsing artist for Bach trumpets. His debut solo album, On The Horizon, is available on the MSR label.

Pat Coil (Jazz Studies - Piano)
Associate Professor

Pat Coil is an extremely accomplished pianist, composer, producer, arranger and program-mer, as well as a highly respected studio musician. He has toured Japan, South America, Europe and the United States with such artists as Michael McDonald, Carmen McRae, Amy Grant, Vince Gill, Woody Herman and many others. Pat has recorded with Natalie Cole, Trisha Yearwood, Ernie Watts, Carmen McRae, BeBe & CeCe Winans, Travis Tritt, Peter Cetera, Scott Henderson, Woody Herman, Michael McDonald, and Olivia Newton John. Coil attended UNT in the 1970s, and while at UNT performed with the One O’Clock Lab Band and freelanced in Dallas and Fort Worth. His most notable association was playing, touring and recording with Woody Herman’s Orchestra later that decade. Coil eventually moved to Los Angeles where he worked in the studios. Prior to joining UNT, Pat served on the jazz faculty at Middle Tennessee State University. Pat has recorded six jazz albums of his own, the third in collaboration with UNT alumnus Lyle Mays. Pat brings to our faculty a deep foundation in straight-ahead jazz and an extraordinarily broad range of collaborations developed over many years of live and studio performances in the Los Angeles and Nashville music scenes.
Tanya Darby (Jazz Studies - Trumpet)
Assistant Professor

By the age of 12 Tanya Darby was already expressing the elements of a mature jazz player. An awestruck audience at the Monterey Jazz Festival soon welcomed this young talent annually and could count on hearing her with the festival’s elite. After being invited to perform with the Festival All-Star Band several times, she was a celebrity with jazz aficionados throughout Japan and the West Coast. Playing lead trumpet with the Grammy All-Star Band brought her to the East Coast where she soon after received her bachelor’s degree in jazz performance at the Manhattan School of Music. From there, Tanya began freelancing throughout the New York metropolitan area going on to perform with such artists as Jon Faddis, Clark Terry, Frank Foster, Dee Dee Bridgewater, Diane Reeves, Ramsey Lewis and Slide Hampton. She has appeared on the television show “BET on Jazz” as part of the T. S. Monk Sextet and performed with Aretha Franklin as part of the Arista Records Twenty-five Year Anniversary Special on NBC. As a member of DIVA, an ensemble of 15 extremely talented and versatile musicians who just happen to be women, she has performed with such guest artists as Nancy Wilson, Joe Williams, Diane Schurr and Dave Brubeck. Their international tours have taken them to such venues as the Blue Note, Montreal Jazz Festival, Kennedy Center, Verizon Jazz Festival at Lincoln Center, Lionel Hampton Jazz Room in Paris, Teatro de Sistina in Rome and Carnegie Hall. Tanya completed her master’s degree in jazz performance at Rutgers University. She has taught at Temple University, The New School University in New York City, Birch Creek Music Center, New York Pops and Harlem School of the Arts.

Rebecca Geoffroy-Schwinden (Music History)
Assistant Professor

Rebecca Geoffroy-Schwinden brings the combined methodologies of history and anthropology to archival work on eighteenth-century music, particularly of the French Revolution. Her interests include the professionalization of musicians in eighteenth-century Paris, the symbiotic relationship between French Enlightenment philosophies of music and everyday musical practices, and networks of amateur and professional musicians across Parisian social institutions. Rebecca's recent work has investigated the music education and musical careers of women in eighteenth and early nineteenth-century France. Rebecca’s research has been published in journals such as Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture, and presented at national meetings including the American Musicological Society, the Society for Ethnomusicology, and the American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies, and at international conferences in France and Portugal. Rebecca’s secondary research in sound studies traverses audible history, digital humanities, and film music, and has been published in Provoke! Digital Sound Studies and Kinetophone. Rebecca earned B.A.s with distinction and honors, phi beta kappa, in history and international studies from Penn State’s Schreyer Honors College. She received an A.M. and Ph.D. in musicology from Duke University. At Duke, her research was supported by multiple endowed fellowships and she was inducted as a member of the Society of Duke Fellows.

Retirement: Berthe Odnoposoff (Piano)
Lecturer

Berthe Huberman Odnoposoff, a relative of virtuoso violinist and Palestine Orchestra founder Bronislaw Huberman, was born in Paris in 1925. Ms. Odnoposoff lived in Havana, Cuba, where she studied at the Conservatory under the guidance of Jascha Fisherman, Erwin Herbst and Joaquin Nin. She also met her husband, UNT emeritus faculty cellist Adolfo Odnoposoff, in Havana. After graduating from the Conservatory in Havana with a bachelor’s degree, she sought a teaching career in Mexico where she dedicated herself to educational piano for children. Ms. Odnoposoff later served as professor of piano at the University of Puerto Rico for thirteen years before she and her husband joined the UNT faculty in 1976. As performers, the Odnoposoffs toured for six months each year and performed in almost every country in Europe as well as the Soviet Union, Israel, Lebanon, Egypt, all of Latin America and the United States. In 1977, Governor Dolph Briscoe made the couple Honorary Citizens of Texas. Ms. Odnoposoff was inducted into the National Guild of Piano Teachers Hall of Fame in 1987 and chosen as Honor Teacher for the “Van Cliburn Concert Series” at UNT in 1988. In 1989, Ms. Odnoposoff organized Hispanic Friends Pro-Musica to assist gifted and talented Hispanic UNT students. The Denton Music Teachers Association awarded her the DMTA Collegiate Teacher of the Year in 2000.

Over the past 125 years at UNT, many people were instrumental in transforming the college into the comprehensive institution it is today. Dedicated faculty, staff and administrators have built upon the legacies of others coming before them, making lasting impacts and turning passion and ideas into successful realities. These individuals are the heart of our story and driving force of our evolution.

Mr. George E. Morey is one such individual. George was an influential professor and mentor, teaching composition and flute. Throughout his distinguished 33-year career at UNT, George was also a dedicated family man. He also conducted the UNT Symphony Orchestra for 25 years and played viola in the Faculty String Quartet.

He and his wife Pat, a piano teacher, imparted the value of education, music and community to their five children, all of whom graduated from North Texas State University: George Patrick (MBA '73, '69), Bridget (MEd '73, '70), Michael (MMEd '78, BS '73), Katherine (BM '76) and Margaret (BS '83). That same joy for music passed to the third generation of Moreys: Grandson Matthew Morey (BM '10) earned his bachelor’s in jazz performance, and grandson Michael Morey Jr. (DMA '11) is currently pursuing a PhD in musicology. Of Pat and George’s 17 grandchildren, a total of 9 have attended UNT.

“Mom and Dad loved learning, travel and music,” remembers daughter Margaret Morey Payne. “My mother often accompanied my father as he played his flute or viola. Our beagle, Hans, added his own tune by howling in the background. And that, combined with teenagers who loved all kinds of music, made for a musically diverse home.”

George Patrick Morey, a retired executive, reminisces, “We all went to North Texas, not just because it made economic sense with five kids, but because North Texas is a first-rate university. My education has blessed my life.” He and his wife, Nesha Stone Morey (BM ’73), as well as five other members of the Morey family, have continually given scholarships to UNT in music and business, nearly half a million dollars to date.

In November 2014, grandson Michael Morey Jr. organized a tribute concert featuring world premieres of many of his grandfather’s formerly unknown works. The following article is Michael’s personal account of the experience of compiling, editing and organizing the concert, which revitalized a rather unknown portion of George Morey’s musical legacy.
A Grandson Reflects
By Michael Morey Jr.

I remember asking my grandmother if my grandfather, George Morey, wrote any music. She sent me a bundle of manuscripts, mainly individual parts to pieces that he had written during his time at UNT. I was blown away. Granddad didn’t talk about his compositions with our family and it was not his main focus as a professional musician. I knew then how special these manuscripts were and that we had an opportunity for both my family and the College of Music to understand and experience another side to George Morey’s legacy as a teacher, performer and – as we know now – a composer.

Granddad’s works reveal an exceptional level of compositional craftsmanship, an avid interest in early music and a unique performer/composer aesthetic. The manuscripts exposed often-virtuosic writing and further investigation suggested that much of his music was probably composed for UNT faculty gatherings. Granddad saw composition as an intellectual leisure activity – a hobby ultimately experienced socially with close friends and colleagues, bringing people together.

George Morey’s legacy rests largely in the memories of the colleagues, family and friends who knew him best. Morris Martin, now retired, was the head librarian at the UNT Music Library for over 40 years and said that George was “the most brilliant man I’ve ever met.” The November 2014 tribute concert gave audience members the rare opportunity to experience that brilliance directly.

I am overwhelmingly grateful for the support and encouragement I have received throughout this six-year journey. Without the help of Dean James Scott, professors Joseph Klein and Mary Karen Clardy, and many others, the tribute concert would not have come together in such a successful way. Students and professors alike helped to create the positive collaboration that was especially rewarding for all involved.

What a joy to see Granddad’s friends, family and colleagues contribute to sharing his legacy with a new generation of musicians and music-lovers. As time goes on, my hope, and that of my family, is that George Morey’s life and music will continue to impact and inspire for generations to come.
Although South Africa celebrated 20 years of democracy in 2014, the country is still plagued by the effects of 46 years of apartheid and its precursors on its social and educational policies. Under the old regime’s leadership, educational resources were distributed disproportionately by race. The problem of inequitable funding of schools can still be felt in non-white areas, and this includes funding for music programs. Though music has been allowed in mainstream curriculum since 1994, many schools still do not have music programs due to lack of facilities and funding. Karendra Devroop (PhD ’01) has created a program to bring music into resource-poor South African schools to inspire a new generation of students.

Karendra Devroop grew up in South Africa with four siblings. His father died when he was 11 years old and his mother worked in a factory to support the entire family. Karendra’s mother expected him to pursue a career that would earn him a secure living, but Karendra’s dream was to study music. He worked and saved in order to finance his education and earned his bachelor’s and master’s degrees in music at the University of Kwa-Zulu-Natal in South Africa. After completing these degrees, he decided he wanted to continue broadening his horizons and gain an international perspective through further studies.

“The throughout my life I had this one burning desire… to study in the United States,” says Karendra, and after nearly a decade of applying for financial support to study in the U.S., his dream was realized with the help of the Fulbright Program. Three years later, Karendra received his Ph.D. in music education with a jazz emphasis at UNT and went on to serve as assistant professor of music at Elizabethtown College in Pennsylvania.

The Power of Music is changing our communities, and our communities are changing the world.

Pennsylvania.

In 2008, Karendra’s desire to have an impact on the lives of impoverished children in his home country began. While still in the United States, he established the South African Music Outreach Project (SAMOP) to promote music education in his South Africa which was still struggling from the lingering effects of apartheid.

To assist the recovering country, Karendra and SAMOP exported donated instruments from the United States for use in South African schools and worked to establish sustainable music programs at multicultural, disadvantaged high schools, particularly in the KwaZulu-Natal province.

In 2010, Karendra left the United States and returned to South Africa to teach at North-West University as professor of music and director of the School of Music. In 2012, he was appointed professor of music at the University of South Africa (UNISA), Pretoria, where he also serves as the director of the UNISA Music Foundation.

Since founding SAMOP, Karendra and his team have built and established concert band programs at three schools. They also have conducted follow-up research, which has been published in multiple scholarly journals. These findings are influencing music education curriculum development in international institutions of higher learning as well as impacting music educators’ approach to teaching music to impoverished urban cultures worldwide.

The music programs were very successful and participating students showed increased motivation, better attitudes and improved social skills. Many of the students went on to study music at the collegiate level, an unexpected result that may create a new era of music education in South Africa possible.

On May 20, 2015, saxophonist, arranger, composer, bandleader, and producer Bob Belden (BM ’78) died of a heart attack at the age of 58. Just months before his passing, Belden and his bandmates in Animation became the first American musicians to perform in Iran since the 1979 Iranian Revolution. After the spark of an idea, and over a year of work connecting with delegates tied to Iran, Bob and the group brought all-American jazz to a sold-out crowd in Tehran’s Vahdat Concert Hall as part of the Fajr International Music Festival.

The tour, organized by the non-profit organization Search for Common Ground, which encourages cross-cultural ties between Iran and the United States, was a whirlwind, six-day trek across Iran. Officials accompanied Belden and the band to various private events leading up to the public concert.

Despite the political tensions between Iran and the United States, a spirit of unity defined the tour. The band met and engaged with a multitude of Iranian citizens interested in exchanging cultural knowledge. Animation drummer and current UNT student Matt Young stated “…it was amazing. We were exactly the same. We wanted the same thing in terms of the artistic aspects of culture and our values as people were aligned.”

Those close to Bob say that he was overjoyed with being a cultural ambassador in Iran. He believed that the trip made a true impact on the interactions of our two societies—not only through the trip itself, but also through a documentary being made about the tour. The film’s director, Foad Farid, stated in a recent Chicago Tribune article about the project, “I like to call it music diplomacy: to be able to bring our nations together.”

Young said in a recent interview that Bob “was always thinking of outlandish ideas and concepts and would do everything he could to figure out how to bring them to fruition. He was fueled by the desire to bring people together who, in our generation, would not normally connect.”

Bob Belden’s life demonstrated that music can be the vehicle for this dream to become a reality. Bob showed the world that people are people, no matter from where they come, no matter what they believe and no matter the political climate.

This historic trip gives hope that unity and peace are truly attainable.
As musicians, we have long touted the benefits of studying music - the undeniable impact it has on cognitive development, especially language and literacy; the benefits to socialization as students work towards common goals and participate in group problem solving; and the development of a heightened sense of personal responsibility, self-discipline, and self-confidence. In his music program called Soundscapes, Reynaldo Ramirez (BM ’00) and his colleagues are using a version of El Sistema to offer young children in Virginia musical training at an early age and strengthen the lives of at-risk youth.

In 2009, Reynaldo Ramirez left a successful career as an education director, first for the Virginia Symphony Orchestra and later the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, in order to start Soundscapes, an El Sistema-inspired program based in Newport News, Virginia. Now, children in the program are not only having fun learning music, but they are also academically performing 17-23% better than their peers.

Rey is not only directly involved in making positive change in his own community, but he is also creating a ripple effect on the national scale. He is currently the treasurer of El Sistema USA and a co-facilitator at the Take A Stand Conference in Los Angeles and the Social Action Through Music Symposium in Philadelphia.

The El Sistema approach to music education originated in Venezuela in 1975. Its founder, José Antonio Abreu started the program with the twin goals of establishing global access to a high quality musical education for all Venezuelan children without regard to their economic status, and using musical training as a tool for transformation in the lives of the poorest of the poor. The program started with 11 students and has grown to include more than half a million children annually within Venezuela. Outside of Venezuela, programs inspired by El Sistema have been established in more than 50 countries.

“The way that Soundscapes and other El Sistema programs see impact,” says Ramirez, “is that a child, starting in first grade, is able to begin practicing scaling the ‘mountain’ we call music making. There will be successes and failures, but through the process they will build the skills – the determination – needed to break out of the cycle of poverty.”

Beyond his work with Soundscapes, Rey has established El Sistema Solutions, a consulting firm that helps establish new El Sistema-based programs around the country. Since 2009, the number of new programs has grown from 4 to 117, and in 2015, over 28,000 children will be reached. Though a small number compared to the number of children in poverty who need help, these programs have grown exponentially from the 1,200 students involved in El Sistema-based programs in 2009. It is clear that the movement to uplift young students in poverty in the United States through music has begun, and Rey’s mission is working.
Retired Faculty Leave A Lasting Legacy On The College of Music

Professor – it’s more than a title – more than a career. For College of Music faculty, their students are their family, the walls of the Music Building are their second home, and their course subjects are their passions. Just as our students and alumni warmly reminisce on the friendships and experiences that transpire throughout their college days, retired faculty members reserve a special place in their hearts for the people and memories that transformed their lives.

In the 2014–2015 academic year, three retired faculty members decided to make significant gifts to the College of Music in support of the students they loved so much. Jim and Cheryl Gillespie, Eva and Harold Heiberg, and Deanna Bush have named the College of Music as a beneficiary in their estate plans, leaving much of their estates to our musical community. Their planned gifts are designated as follows:

- The James and Cheryl Gillespie Scholarship in Clarinet
- The James and Cheryl Gillespie Fellowship in Clarinet
- The James and Cheryl Gillespie Visiting Artists Endowment Fund
- The Harold Heiberg Voice/Accompanying Scholarship
- The Ralph W. Bush and Pauline H. Bush Professorship in Music History
- The Ralph W. Bush and Pauline H. Bush Doctoral Fellowship in Music History

So what exactly inspired these generous retired faculty members?

For Harold and Eva Heiberg, Harold students were their extended family, and their decision to endow was prompted by a desire to support exceptionally talented vocalists and accompanists.

Deanna Bush, emerita professor of music history, is passionate about supporting music history students, the program and honoring her parents, Ralph and Pauline.

Jim and Cheryl explained, “It was such a pleasure to work with our students. We are so pleased that we now are able to support them.”

A planned gift is a wonderful way to make a substantial contribution to the UNT College of Music regardless of your current on-hand cash. Many alumni, faculty, staff and friends of the College of Music opt to make a gift of a will, trust, estate, or life insurance policy as a way of making a large gift without writing a check.

Planned giving allows for any household budget to leave a lasting legacy on the UNT College of Music. Interested in making a planned gift to the UNT College of Music? Please contact Alan Klaas, Senior Director of Development, at 940-369-7979 or Alan.Klaas@unt.edu.

David Charles McGuire, 92, died on March 27, 2015 in Denton, TX. He grew up in rural northeast Kansas, graduating from Keats High School in 1940. After serving in the Army during World War II he graduated with a bachelor of music education degree from Southwestern College in Winfield, Kansas. He went on to earn a master of music education degree from the University of Michigan and a doctor of music education degree from Indiana University. Before moving to Denton in 1962 where he became coordinator of graduate studies in music education at NTSU, he directed public school bands in Kansas and Colorado and was the director of wind ensembles, percussion ensembles and music education at Beloit College in Wisconsin.

He was voted Honor Professor at the University of North Texas and was named professor emeritus by the College of Music upon his retirement in 1987. Southwestern College also bestowed an honorary doctorate on him and inducted him into both the SC Fine Arts and Education halls of fame. He was married to Katherine Elaine Isely for 58 years. Katherine passed away in 2002.

In 2007, he married Ruth Neufeld Cooper Davis, a long-time family friend. He is survived by Ruth, three children and their spouses, seven grandchildren, and three siblings. David was a teacher, mentor and friend to many generations of music educators. He also served as a “bonus” father to many young people. He was very involved at his church.

David Hall Sundquist was born in Chicago on July 21, 1941 and lived in Michigan and Kansas. Growing up, David sang and played the trumpet, trombone and tuba, becoming the Drum Major at Topeka High School. He attended Washburn University and became the university Drum Major as a freshman. David later moved to Chicago where he met Dr. Harvey Ringel, who helped him win scholarships at the Chicago Musical College, Roosevelt University. During his final semester, David was drafted to the Vietnam War, in the United States Army Band and Chorus. In 1965, David married Gladys Vacek and had two children. While serving, David sang with opera companies such as the Washington Opera Society, National Symphony, and Baltimore Opera. He also taught voice at the University of Maryland.

Beginning in 1969, David sang with San Francisco Opera’s Western Opera Theater for two seasons and freelanced in productions such as La Bohème, Faust, and Rigoletto. From 1974–78 David and family were in Strasbourg, France, where he performed in Mignon, Fledermaus, and Salome and also with the Strasbourg Philharmonic. From 1978–81 he performed in Austria and won 1st place in the Salzburg Opera Film Prize Competition. From 1981–84, he and his family moved to America but David returned to Austria alone in 1984, performing with the Graz Opernhaus. On July 21, 1989, David married Christine Jahn.

David began at UNT in September 1989 and received tenure as Associate Professor in 1995. He continued to perform in faculty recitals and in different cities. In 2000, David was diagnosed with Parkinson’s and retired from UNT in 2012. On May 16, 2014, he was diagnosed with esophageal cancer and on August 8, 2015, David passed peacefully with his wife and son at his side. He is survived by many loving family members.

Editor’s Note

At the time of publication, the College of Music received notice of the passing of Regents Professor Emeritus Cecil D. Adkins. His passing will be commemorated in our next issue.

Repair The World
Dr. Jerry McCoy

Director of Choral Studies and Regents Professor of Music
Dr. Jerry McCoy, retiring after a distinguished 36-year career, delivered the following speech at the College of Music Undergraduate Recognition Ceremony on May 15, 2015.

“…What will your mark on the world be? How will you use what you have learned to change the lives of those around you? Perhaps, to impact the world you must first find your own contentment. The idea of discovering one’s contentment has been at the core of human life for ages. The 13th century Sufi poet Jalal ad-Din Muhammad Rumi wrote:

‘Today, like every day, we wake up empty and frightened. Don’t open the door to the study and start reading. Take down a musical instrument. Let the beauty we love be what we do…’

Rumi’s final line lies at the heart of a musician’s – of an artist’s – hope for success. ‘Let the beauty we love be what we do…’

A friend once shared with me his keys to success and personal contentment: show up (on time), be prepared, do your very best and don’t be tied to the outcome. Following these principles, one may find inner peace and the ability to share it with a world sorely in need. Pass on the love of what you do. Love of life, of people, of your art form; love of beauty, peace and community are indeed contagious.

It is important to remember that the path to happiness isn’t the same for everyone and there isn’t just one way to get from one point to another. In my junior year of college, I dropped out of school to play in a rock-and-roll band on the West Coast, but needing to support my family, I eventually left the band and went to work for the U.S. Postal Service back home in Texas. After the first year of a real job, a yen for the studies I’d left behind years before began to grow and crystallize. I went back for my music education degree part-time. During one of my classes, a professor told me I should do something else with my life, that I ‘just didn’t have what it takes.’ Well, I took that teacher’s advice and within the year, I dropped the dream of being a choir director for a second time.

As it often does, life eventually led me back to what I was born to be: a teacher and an artist. After seven years at the Postal Service, I left to pursue graduate degrees in choral conducting at UT Austin. With a good dose of perseverance and the help of many, I am thankful to have spent more than thirty-six years as a successful university choral conductor, having developed and led one of America’s foremost university choral programs, as well as festival, all-state, university and professional choirs in thirty-nine U.S. states and numerous foreign countries.

The lesson I learned is this: the road toward attaining one’s dreams is different for everyone. At a particularly difficult moment of discouragement, my wife presented me with a card, quoting a Chinese proverb that says ‘those who say it cannot be done shouldn’t interrupt the person doing it.’ Even when you deeply want something and life seems to shout a resounding, ‘It cannot be done,’ listen to your heart and find your own path.
What is the real calling and responsibility of an educated person, of an educated artist?

Few careers are so well suited to the idea of repairing the world than is a career in music. Whether we teach, perform or compose, we are life changers, which is the real definition of an artist. Our participatory art form is in many ways the most influential in the world. In its myriad manifestations we have the opportunity to shape personal and national character, to enhance communal ethics, to stoke the fires of creativity and self-expression, and to sing into existence a world of unity, justice and hope.

Whether it was playing, singing, composing, or the concepts of study, responsibility and creativity, what you have learned during your time at UNT is an invitation to repair the world around you. Music is your chosen tool for this task. It is your language, your palette and your clay. It is the expression of your soul’s need to affirm its being – its need to create and to belong, its need to deepen humankind’s spirituality.

I would like to leave you with a passage I came across in Ian McEwan’s book, Saturday:

‘There are these rare moments when musicians together touch something sweeter than they’ve ever found before in rehearsals or performance, beyond the merely collaborative or technically proficient, when their expression becomes as easy and graceful as friendship or love. This is when they give us a glimpse of what we might be, of our best selves, and of an impossible world in which you give everything you have to others, but lose nothing of yourself. Out in the real world there exist detailed plans, visionary projects for peaceful realms, all conflicts resolved, happiness for everyone, forever-mirages for which people are prepared to die and kill… But only in music, and only on rare occasions, does the curtain actually lift on this dream of community, and it is tantalizingly conjured, before fading away with the last notes.’

What a beautiful thought this is. But, I disagree with one aspect of McEwan’s excerpt and that is the frequency at which this dream of community actually happens. I don’t find it to be a rarity at all. I believe it happens in thousands of schools, churches and synagogues, and in band, orchestra, choir, opera and jazz rehearsals and concerts… daily.

Thus believing, I read McEwan’s passage as a personal and moral charge for musicians, teachers and artists. Our inborn duty to create community in the world should inspire us – indeed require us – to work at a deeper and more committed level than others. Our expressive artistry is a profound gift and to whom much is given, much is required.

So, when you are weary of the rehearsals, the personal practice, the study, the fundraising, the paperwork or the day-long, emotionally and physically draining schedules we maintain, I hope you will always recall today’s youthful eagerness and remember this charge: love what you do, persevere, repair the world and let no one tell you ‘it cannot be done!’"
