Music from North Texas
2016

Mean Green to Army Green

EST. 1890
Dear alumni, colleagues, friends, and patrons:

It is my great pleasure to greet you as the Dean of the College of Music at the University of North Texas. My few months on the job here in Denton have both reinforced and refined the impressions I have acquired of this storied university from afar. Let me share what I’ve learned.

This is a place of amazingly devoted and gifted faculty and staff. These colleagues are kind, accomplished, appropriately demanding, inexplicably patient, and consistently supportive. It is a remarkable mix of virtues I expected to find, but frankly not in such abundance.

This is a place of diverse, ambitious, competitive, gifted students of every music specialty who are certain to occupy leadership positions in the many professions they soon will join.

This is a place of determined institutional leaders who understand the value of this celebrated College of Music and are eager to see it gain ever higher levels of accomplishment and acclaim.

This is a place of bold imagination – a university poised to honor its distinguished 125-year history with fresh visions, growing ambitions, and important accomplishments. It is a remarkable place.

If ever there was a time to invoke the cliché of “standing on the shoulders of giants,” this occasion seems to me the right one, for I surely benefit from the leadership here of so many of America’s most accomplished music executives. The names (and perhaps the spirits) of such icons as McKissack and Boylan, Bain and Blocker, Shrader and Scott at once inspire me and also give me pause as I consider the scope and consequence of my new job. I am so grateful for them, and, in particular, for the transformational leadership of Dean James Scott over the last 15 years. I also wish to extend profound thanks to Warren Henry for his superb leadership as interim dean this spring and for his willingness to continue as our senior associate dean for academic affairs in the days ahead.

Over the next year, our college will take up important conversations about our strategic future. Across the nation and around the world, music academics are engaged in deep discussions of the alignment of professional music curricula with the music professions that await the next generations. Some facets of these curricula seem quite stable, while others are morphing at a sometimes startling rate. Like few other music institutions in the world, the UNT College of Music is poised to offer critical leadership and so it will be thrilling to participate in these strategic conversations – to listen to each other, learn from each other, and then lead the college to the full realization of our collective vision.

To make this collective vision a reality, we will need your help more than ever. We need your support through your attendance at our events on campus and online. We need your time as volunteers and advisors on our various committees and support groups. And, we need your generous contributions to provide the scholarships, fellowships, program endowments, and other fiscal infrastructure necessary to make the future of our College of Music brighter and more innovative than its storied past. Meanwhile, we pledge to follow Aristotle’s admonition to “repeatedly do” those things that give rise to excellence and virtue in every facet of our work.

Sincerely,

John W. Richmond, Ph.D.
Dean

"I absolutely loved my time at UNT. The mentorship of Regents Professor Keith Johnson and the experience gained from performing in ensembles as varied as the Two O’Clock Lab Band, Wind Symphony, Baroque Orchestra, Chamber Orchestra, Opera Orchestra, solo recitals, and chamber music groups prepared me for any musical opportunity which might arise."

Brad can also be heard on the Dorian label with the Orchestra of New Spain.

Elizabeth Chappell (Music Education)
Senior Lecturer

Prior to joining UNT, Elizabeth Chappell taught orchestra for 17 years in the Austin Independent School District and 12 of those years were in Title One programs. This experience sparked one of her research interests: equity of access to music education in urban public schools. Elizabeth has presented this research and conducted clinics for the American String Teachers Association, National Association for Music Education Southwestern Division Symposium, Texas Music Educators Association and was also published in the Journal of Band Research. She has presented on topics related to inclusion and students with disabilities. Elizabeth’s inclusion research has been presented to the American Music Therapy Association, ASTA and TMEA and has been published in the Journal of Music Therapy. A violinist and violist for nearly 40 years, Elizabeth has performed with various orchestras and chamber groups. She was a conductor for the Austin Youth Orchestra program and taught in the University of Texas String Project.
Fabiana Claure (Director of Career Development and Entrepreneurship in Music)
Senior Lecturer

Fabiana Claure is a multifaceted artist and entrepreneur with a passion for performing, educating and exploring the business side of music. Fabiana is the co-founder and executive director of the Superior Academy of Music in Miami, FL that has been featured twice on national television (PBS). Fabiana holds a doctor of musical arts in piano performance with a related field in music business and entertainment industries from the University of Miami. Her research in the field of music entrepreneurship led her to author her doctoral dissertation entitled “The Entrepreneurial Concert Pianist: A Study of the Diverse Trends Used to Complement a Performing Career.” Fabiana received a master’s degree and artist certificate in piano performance from Southern Methodist University, a bachelor of arts degree in music from the College of Charleston and a pianist, professor and chamber music instructor diploma from the National School of Arts in Havana, Cuba.

Allen Hightower (Director of Choral Studies)
Professor

Prior to joining UNT, Allen Hightower was the first holder of the Weston Noble Endowed Chair in Music at Luther College. As director of choral activities, he led a program that included four conductors, six choirs and over 530 singers. Allen earned a bachelor’s degree in music education from Sam Houston State University, a master’s degree in choral conducting from Eastman School of Music, a master’s degree in orchestral conducting from Baylor University and a doctorate in conducting from University of California, Los Angeles. Allen pursued further orchestral conducting studies at the University of Southern California; and was a member of the conducting class of Helmuth Rilling at the Oregon Bach Festival. Allen was first-prize winner in the graduate division of the American Choral Directors Association Conducting Competition in 1997; and from 1997–2000 served as assistant to Paul Salamunovich, conductor of the Los Angeles Master Chorale.

Natalie Mannix (Trombone)
Assistant Professor

Natalie Mannix is an avid trombone soloist, chamber musician, orchestral performer and educator. Prior to joining UNT, Natalie was associate professor of trombone at Towson University, and principal trombone with Delaware Symphony Orchestra and Ash Lawn Opera Orchestra. Natalie also was a member of the United States Navy Band in Washington, DC for over nine years. Natalie’s recent recordings include an upcoming solo CD, Broken Ground: A Celebration of Women Composers, and two chamber music CDs, the Grammy-nominated Interchange: Concertos by Rodrigo and Assad with the Delaware Symphony and the LA Guitar Quartet; and Shadowcatcher: Music for Winds, Brass and Percussion. As a euphonium soloist, Natalie won first place in the Leonard Falcone International Solo Competition, was solo euphonium for the Imperial Brass Band and a finalist in the International Tuba Euphonium Conference Solo Competition. Natalie received her degrees from the University of Michigan, The Juilliard School and Catholic University.
Steven Menard (Trombone)
Assistant Professor

Steven Menard holds a bachelor's degree in trombone performance from Northwestern University and a master's degree in performance from the San Francisco Conservatory. Steven maintains an active performing schedule, and has recorded and performed with the Chicago Symphony, San Francisco Symphony, San Antonio Symphony, San Diego Symphony, Oregon Symphony, Honolulu Symphony, Virginia Symphony and Louisiana Philharmonic. As a soloist he has presented recitals around the country, and was the 2008 winner of the Frank Smith Solo Competition at the International Trombone Festival. Steven is passionate about chamber music, and is a founding member of the Equali Quartet, a trombone quartet made up of members of the St. Louis Symphony, Jacksonville Symphony and the Cincinnati Symphony. Steven is a performing artist for Shires Trombones.

April Prince (Music History)
Senior Lecturer

Grounded in cultural and gender studies, April Prince's research focuses on 19th-century German pianism as well as southern cultural and musical identity. April received a grant from the Gladys Krieble Delmas Visiting Scholar Program, funding archival work at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Library and Archives to examine the songs of early 20th-century country music and blues women. Before coming to UNT, April designed and taught courses across the general education curriculum at Loyola University New Orleans. Focusing on music as it relates to cultural context, her classes included topics on gender and sexuality, American popular music and music outside the traditional canon. April received her undergraduate degree from Wesleyan College in Macon, Georgia and her PhD in musicology from the University of Texas at Austin.

Gudrun Raschen (Double Bass)
Lecturer

Gudrun Raschen has extensive experience on both double bass and cello. She has taught and performed at Pan American Music Festival in South Texas, International Chamber Music Festival in South Africa, International Bass Convention in Poland, Oficina de Música in Curitiba, Brazil, International Chamber Music Festival in Positano, Italy, Arts Festival Autumn Melodies in Vietnam and Performing Arts Festival in Hawaii. She has toured with these ensembles to Brazil, Bolivia, Mexico and Vietnam. Gudrun has also performed with Cape Town Philharmonic, Natal Philharmonic, Fort Worth Symphony, Dallas and Texas chamber orchestras, Richardson Symphony, Wichita Falls Symphony and East Texas Symphony. Gudrun earned her bachelor and master's degrees from the University of Cape Town, South Africa. She received her doctorate in double bass performance at the University of North Texas.

Vivek Virani (Ethnomusicology – Music Theory)
Assistant Professor

Vivek Virani received his PhD in ethnomusicology at University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA). Vivek's dissertation explored how songs of South Asian devotional poet-saints are used to negotiate issues of culture, religion and society at the regional and national levels. His broader interests in ethnomusicology include music and spiritual expression; music and community-building; music, religion and nation; and Indian classical music. Vivek has trained in classical tabla performance under Suresh Talwalkar and Swapan Chaudhuri. He regularly performs South Asian classical, folk and devotional music on tabla, bamboo flute and other instruments. Recently, Vivek has contributed a chapter on altered states of consciousness in classical tabla compositions to be published in Music and Consciousness 2 by Oxford University Press and a chapter on caste reform through devotional singing to be published in Songs of Social Protest.
Gene Cho
Professor

Gene Cho retired in 2016 as a full professor. He taught pedagogy of theory, music theory analysis, and aural skills. Gene is a member of the Charter Editorial Board of Journal of Music Theory Pedagogy, and an editorial board member of Journal of Music in China (Los Angeles). His compositions and arrangements for voice, piano, ensemble, and orchestra have been performed in the United States, Europe, and Asia. His most recent commissioned original compositions include incidental music for a stage play titled Confucius, and a musical setting of a literary tone poem, Abraham Lincoln: The Whole Heart, for orchestra, chorus, soli and narrators. His most recent monograph, Replica of the Ark of the Lost Covenant, fuses religion studies with Japanese cultural history for an insightful glimpse into the interplay of new and old traditions. Gene has presented lectures, clinics and workshops in theory, conducting and composition in six countries outside the United States. In addition, Gene teaches a sequence of courses in music and culture of China and Japan and directs field study programs to Asia.

On September 21, UNT College of Music students and faculty packed the Recital Hall to welcome back alumna and Grammy-winning artist, Norah Jones. More than two hundred students filled the seats to hear the music icon speak during a question-and-answer session facilitated by John W. Richmond, dean of the University of North Texas College of Music.

As Jones entered from backstage and took her seat, the crowd greeted her with an enthusiastic welcome. Jones then spent 50 minutes answering a wide range of questions. The topics ranged from the business side of music, such as maintaining artistic integrity, marketing, and building an international following, to more personal questions like her favorite artists, keeping healthy on tour, and how her journey to stardom began during a fateful drive across the UNT campus in her 1971 Cadillac.

Jones, a jazz studies student at the College of Music from 1997 to 1999, was assigned to pick up jazz bassist Marc Johnson and his band (Jesse Harris, Tony Scherr and Kenny Wollesen) from the Radisson Hotel for a clinic they were leading at the music building. During the drive, Jones was inspired by them and shortly after, moved to New York City to pursue her singing career.

“That short ride from across the highway is, I guess, what started all of this,” Jones says. The move to New York City helped jump-start her career and Jones has since been awarded nine Grammy-awards and sold more than 50 million records.

After the question-and-answer session, UNT President Neal Smatresk presented Jones with the UNT Presidential Medal of Honor, an exclusive award given by the president to acknowledge those who have elevated the university and made significant contributions to the world. It is the highest presidential honor given to an individual and only one other alumnus, sports broadcaster George Dunham, has ever received the award.

“Norah Jones is a celebrated artist who has had such a wonderful impact on the music world, and she has made her alma mater proud,” President Smatresk said. “Her journey from music student to award-winning artist and musical icon inspires our students to work hard to fulfill their dreams.”

Jones wrapped up the session with some advice for students: “How to be successful in music is hard to answer,” Jones said. “It’s a lot of hard work and a lot of luck.”
Philanthropist and College of Music supporter Paul Voertman was presented with an honorary doctorate from the University of North Texas this fall.

“Paul’s devotion to the arts, to UNT and our spirit of creativity knows no bounds. Because of his generosity, our students are fulfilling their dreams of earning a college degree and becoming world-class performers and artists,” said UNT President Neal Smatresk. “He’s helped to nurture UNT’s artistic excellence, which is a core part of our legacy. As we celebrate our 125th anniversary, I’m so proud to thank and honor him for his impacts.”

UNT awards the honorary degree to individuals who, by their extraordinary achievements, add substantial knowledge to the community or better society as a whole.

Paul is a proud patron of music and the arts at UNT whose ties to the university started in kindergarten. He attended the university’s Demonstration School, the training laboratory for UNT students studying to be teachers, through high school. He went on to attend UNT through his sophomore year before transferring to the University of Texas at Austin, where he earned a bachelor of arts in economics in 1949. He served in the U.S. Army for two years in the 1950s.

Because of his passion for music and the arts, Paul has helped hundreds of UNT students to hone their musical and artistic talents through his generosity. In addition to countless gifts for scholarships that have helped hundreds and his provision of operational support for the college, Paul’s giving helped make possible the installation of the Richard Ardoin-Paul Voertman Concert Organ in the Murchison Performing Arts Center and the renovated Paul Voertman Concert Hall in the Music Building.

Through the years, Paul has generously shared his time and passion with UNT, regularly attending campus music performances and art events and serving in numerous capacities.

The UNT College of Music would like to offer sincere congratulations to Paul for receiving this well-earned honor and for his many years as a generous supporter of the College of Music.
Thirty years after their first trip to Australia, the One O’Clock Lab Band headed back down under for two weeks this past May. “This trip was a long time coming,” said Craig Marshall, program manager for the band. “We were fortunate enough to have the opportunity to spend two weeks playing concerts, hosting clinics and masterclasses and expanding our cultural knowledge.”

This year’s trip included performances, workshops and rehearsals in Mt. Gambier, Melbourne and Sydney.

“Our student musicians assisted in leading concerts and clinics at James Morrison Academy (JMA), performed for thousands of jazz students from all across Australia as featured headliner at the Generations in Jazz festival, and collaborated with numerous jazz professionals and jazz orchestras from Australia and around the world,” said One O’Clock Lab Band Director Jay Saunders.

As the headliner at Generations in Jazz, the band performed for more than 6,500 students and jazz fans in Mt. Gambier. Near the end of the main concert, they shared the stage with the top big band from JMA for a double big band set featuring Wycliffe Gordon, Kate Ceberano, Ross Irwin and James Morrison as soloists.

Following their festival performance, the band spent two days conducting clinics at JMA. Situated in the middle of downtown Mt. Gambier, JMA is one of the main attractions of Mt. Gambier and is bustling every day of the week with students, tours and jazz.

After leaving Mt. Gambier, the band’s focus turned to preparing for their Lab 2016 recording session. They rehearsed extensively at the Australian Institute of Music in Melbourne and Sydney to prepare.

The last time the One O’Clock Lab Band toured Australia was in 1986 under the direction of Neil Slater. It was an experience that helped to launch careers for many alumni, including former One O’Clock Lab Band director Steve Wiest; Dave Pietro, a jazz saxophonist who recorded with the Toshiko Akiyoshi Jazz Orchestra; Mike Williams, Count Basie Orchestra’s lead trumpet since 1987; and Tony Scherr, a bassist who has recorded with Bill Frisell.

The College of Music offers ample international experiences that give students and faculty opportunities to perform, study and exchange ideas around the world. “This trip was not a vacation,” Saunders said. “This was a professional development opportunity of a lifetime.”

“You’re from North Texas! Aren’t you?”

It wasn’t long after my first few steps in Egner Hall at West Point that I was greeted with an eagle claw. (OK, not really, but I had mine ready alongside a vigilantly practiced hand salute.) Upon accepting a position in the band, enlisting in the United States Army, and completing Basic Combat Training, I joined the band in February of 2014. I serve alongside nine University of North Texas College of Music alumni.

On October 22, 2016, Army West Point football played UNT, so I saw it fitting to gather the alums for a group photo as we briefly reminisced about the experiences and interactions that helped prepare us to be non-commissioned officers in the West Point Band – one of the Army’s premier bands – tracing its roots to a fifer and drummer during the time of the American Revolution.

Some of my most vivid memories while at UNT were interactions with faculty members. My professors coached me to a higher, more consistent level of artistry, which included performing when I didn’t “feel” ready amidst balancing several deadlines – in other words, real-life experience. I remember my flute instructor Dr. Mary Karen Clardy handing me Variations on “Nel cor piú” by Theobald Boehm, and performing it less than 12 hours later. I also recall my conductor at the time, Professor Dennis Fisher, giving the Symphonic Band a piece to sight read during a performance. Looking back, these performances instilled confidence in my musical development. While the instructors challenged me to consistency in performing, everything was very process-driven, focusing on fundamentals and musicality.

One common aspect appreciated among fellow University of North Texas alumni was that of being afforded the opportunity to perform in an array of ensembles. Through numerous performances in these diverse ensembles, members of the band gained a unique outlook while practicing the skill of performance in and of itself.

This perspective has come to serve us well in the West Point Band, where programs and ceremonies are regularly adapted to serve our audience: the United States Corps of Cadets, as well as local, national, and international communities. Being versatile, flexible, and willing to change at a moment’s notice are skills that I have come to appreciate.

With more than 30,000 students enrolled in the University of North Texas, there is an inherent competitive atmosphere in the College of Music. Similar to music conservatories across the country, talent, excellence, and sheer virtuosity practically burst out of the doors at 415 Avenue C, Denton, Texas. Nevertheless, I remember the environment being incredibly supportive. In my time there I observed fellow studio members’ lessons and attended numerous recitals and concerts. I’ll always remember scurrying off to the practice building upon hearing the inspiring performances.
Exceptional Mentorship

“UNT’s College of Music is known as a powerhouse over the world. The large number of music students fuels an array of ensembles in which I was able to take part. Although my program was large, I never felt like a number. I was able to form close mentorships with my professors there that were extremely important to my development.”

–Staff Sgt. David Bergman

“My musical duties in the West Point Band primarily consist of rudimental snare drum, and orchestral percussion including timpani and drumset. At UNT, I honed these skills with three world-class musicians as my teachers: Paul Rennick, Christopher Deane, and Ed Soph respectively. Their mentorship was a critical part of my development and success.”

–Sgt. 1st Class Rone Sparrow

Unique Opportunities

“I’m really grateful for my time at UNT; it afforded me countless performing opportunities, from Wind Symphony and Symphony Orchestra, to NOVA (contemporary music ensemble), opera orchestra, and chamber ensembles. Being in such a large music school, I was able to study with two teachers in the course of the same semester and gain a wider perspective, and as a means to improve myself as a musician at a faster rate. Everything was really centered on that for me.”

–Staff Sgt. Sam Ross

“I had the opportunity to perform in so many ensembles: small chamber ensembles, Wind Symphony, Symphony Orchestra, UNT Opera productions, NOVA ensemble, and flute choir.”

–Staff Sgt. Katrina Elsnick

“I absolutely loved my time at UNT. The mentorship of Regents Professor Keith Johnson and the experience gained from performing in ensembles as varied as the Two O’Clock Lab Band, Wind Symphony, Baroque Orchestra, Chamber Orchestra, Opera Orchestra, solo recitals, and chamber music groups prepared me for any musical opportunity which might arise.”

–Master Sgt. John Manning

A Healthy Dose of Competition

“The real-world level of excellence and competition that the faculty and students create at the University of North Texas gave me the skills and confidence to pursue any professional goals I have achieved.”

–Sgt. 1st Class Jeff Prosperie

“UNT was my first choice for graduate studies. I knew the size, diversity, and quality of the percussion department and the student body would provide the greatest opportunity for me to learn and grow as a musician. It was an energized environment with great music and stiff competition.”

–Sgt. 1st Class Rone Sparrow
The UNT College of Music is committed to providing educational opportunities that include musical and academic experiences covering a broad spectrum of historical, cultural and stylistic perspectives. Since 2016 has been a year for women making major strides in politics, and the military opening all combat roles to females, the College of Music’s opera program developed a season celebrating strong women.

“I think celebrating strong women is a topic that for many reasons – politically, socially, and personally – has a real resonance,” said Stephen Dubberly, music director of the UNT opera program. “We’re excited to be a part of it.”

The first production was Gertrude Stein and Virgil Thom-son’s The Mother of Us All, a modern opera chronicling the life of Susan B. Anthony and her tireless fight for women’s suffrage. Featuring the UNT Opera and Concert Orchestra, The Mother of Us All melded together both fictional and non-fictional characters from American history to convey the story of how women were legally given the right to vote.

The second production was Monteverdi’s The Coronation of Poppea. This 17th-century opera tells the story of how Poppea, a beautiful and ruthless woman, is able to scheme her way to the top of the Roman Empire.

In addition to celebrating strong women, The Coronation of Poppea was a collaborative effort that partnered together students, staff and faculty from across the college’s divisions. Stephen Dubberly and David Ward combined the opera division with powerful student voices and creative staging. Paul Leenhouts directed the Baroque Orchestra who accompanied to the singers on period instruments such as baroque violins, harpsichords, lutes (including a theorbo) and recorders. Professor of Music History, Hendrik Schulze, and a number of UNT musicology students, created the edition used by the Opera and Baroque Orchestra.

“This collaboration was particularly broad in its scope. The result was an unusually rich blend of talents and perspectives that led to stunningly expressive, nuanced, performances of Poppea. Opera is the ultimate team sport,” said Dubberly.

Combining these cross-division skills to collaborate on one stunning production is a hallmark of the College of Music and The Coronation of Poppea was the perfect opera to finish a season dedicated to celebrating strong women.

“We like to perform a great variety of repertoires and styles,” Dubberly said. “Once we looked at the whole picture, this wonderful theme developed. These are strong women who, rather than being victims, show courage in the face of amazing odds,” Dubberly said. “I’m excited that we get to explore the whole picture.”

Faculty

Cecil D. Adkins was born on January 30, 1932 in Red Oak, Iowa and died on November 4, 2015. Cecil earned a BFA in organ from the University of Omaha, an MM in theory from the University of South Dakota and a PhD in theory from the University of Iowa.

Cecil was assistant conductor and arranger for the Fourth Armored Division Band at Fort Hood, Texas; director of instrumental music at the Paullina Independent School District in Paullina, Iowa; Instructor in the Department of Music at Mount Mercy College in Cedar Rapids, Iowa; and Regents Professor of Musicology at the University of North Texas (1963–88).

Much of his time at UNT was devoted to the development of an early music program. During his tenure, the College of Music built a collection of more than 200 period instruments, and he directed the early music groups in over 400 performances.

Cecil was a significant organologist and bibliographer. He produced definitive works on the monochord, the positive organ, the trumpet marine and the history of the oboe in the eighteenth century. Besides his many articles on musical instruments, he was a steady contributor of research papers on a variety of topics and was the recipient of grants from the American Musicological Society, International Musicological Society, Pro Helvetia, American Council of Learned Societies, National Endowment for the Humanities and American Philosophical Society.

Cecil served as President of the American Musical Instrument Society, President of the Southwest Chapter of the American Musicological Society and as national registrar for this Society. He was a member of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia and Pi Kappa Lambda.

Mary Nan Hudgins Mailman, 87, died on June 25, 2016 in Weatherford, TX. She taught at UNT from 1976 to 1995. Her career in music began at age 20 when she won the 1949 G.B. Dealy Memorial Award and played the Mozart Concerto in E-flat Major for Two Pianos with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra. She was also a finalist in the International Concours in Geneva, Switzerland.

Mary Nan earned her bachelor’s degree in 1950 and master’s degree in 1956 in piano performance from UNT, where she studied with Silvio Scionti. She earned an artist diploma from the Juilliard School of Music, studying with the famous piano pedagogue Rosina Lhévinne.

Besides UNT, Mary Nan taught at the Eastman School of Music and East Carolina University. She frequently played in concerts, and she especially loved performing works by Mozart and Poulenc. She often played as a duo-pianist with her longtime friend and fellow piano faculty member, the late Jean Mainous.

Mary Nan was a longtime member of Sigma Alpha Iota and Pi Kappa Lambda. She is survived by two children and two grandchildren.

Roeland “Randy” Elvin Kelly was born June 2, 1948 in Denton, Texas and died June 30, 2016 at home surrounded by friends and family. He was the son of Archie Roeland Kelly and Inez Baker Kelly. He graduated from Denton High School and attended North Texas State University prior to his military service as part of the Armed Forces Courier Service during the Vietnam Conflict. Randy worked for many years as a vice president at North Texas Savings and Loan and retired as the business manager for the UNT College of Music in 2004. While at North Texas Savings and Loan, he was active in the United Way and the Optimist Club. He also taught real estate appraisal for the association. During his 10 years with the College of Music, Randy taught several “popular music” units in the music appreciation course. Randy was a member of First Presbyterian Church, Denton where he served as an elder and was a featured soloist in the choir.

Randy met his future wife, Melody Specht, in Mr. McMath’s Summer Saturday Band classes in 1962 and they married April 11, 1970. He was preceded in death by his father, Archie Roeland Kelly, and is survived by his mother, Inez Baker Kelly; wife, Melody Specht Kelly; son, Roeland Patrick Kelly; sister, Virginia Kelly Craven and husband Richard Craven; brother-in-law Joe Specht and wife Alice Wilson Specht; two nieces, one nephew as well as numerous cousins and friends.

More than 150 years ago, a Lutheran pastor hauled an organ from Switzerland to Texas by sea, and, for years, early German pioneers of Texas played the instrument. Last November, the Raisin Organ, as it is called, found a home at the University of North Texas College of Music.

The Raisin Organ, named for the small Texas town where it was discovered, is believed to have been built around 1780. It served as the first instrument in the Trinity Lutheran Church in Victoria, Texas, until it was placed in storage and forgotten. For almost 75 years, the organ rotted and was ravaged by pests. Victoria businessman Rubin Frell discovered the instrument in a former stagecoach inn and commissioned organ expert Susan Tattershall in 1980 to restore the organ to working condition.

UNT alumna Susan Ferré purchased the Raisin Organ in 1991 and loaned it to the Mesquite Arts Center for public display. In November 2015, Ferré donated the instrument to UNT’s College of Music.
